The Pinal Partnership Renewable Energy Committee, with support from Arizona Forward, has commissioned a study on the economic and employment impact of renewable energy in Arizona. Those findings will be revealed at our first-ever Renewable Energy Economic Summit and Conference to be held on February 7, 2012. Featuring a keynote address by Elliot D. Pollack & Company, this event is sure to provide enlightenment and great networking opportunities.

The Pinal Partnership was founded in 2005 with a mission to, "Improve research, planning and coordination of private and public efforts related to infrastructure, natural resources and community development in Pinal County." The Renewable Energy committee is focused on improving the quality of life in Pinal County and neighboring communities by advocating the adoption of clean energy and energy efficiency solutions through education, promotion of best practices, and identification of opportunities.

Arizona Forward brings business, community and civic leaders together to convene thoughtful public dialogue and advocacy on statewide sustainability issues. The business-based coalition was recently launched by Valley Forward, a 43-year-old environmental public interest organization, to expand its historic mission of balance in environmental quality with economic growth statewide. In addition to transitioning to a clean energy future through renewables and green technology, the basic agenda of Arizona Forward includes land use planning and open space, transportation and water management.
